Border Patrol Cracks Down On Migrating Teachers

By Frederick Durst

LIBERTY, Olentangy-- It has been only a few short months since our expose on the science teachers taking refuge in the foreign language hallways, but this past week a new immigration controversy has been brought to our attention. A group of teachers at Liberty that many are likening to modern day nomads have been incarcerated by ICE.

These teachers reportedly are not residents of Liberty officially, and instead move around to multiple classrooms throughout the day that belong to other teachers. Lacking any proper visas, passports, or even visitor passes from the attendance office, they are wanted by numerous immigration regulation agencies from around the globe.

ICE has been the first group to have a successful sting operation against the group despite their routine daily migration patterns. Previous operations failed due to the fact that the subjects never showed up at the expected time.

Similar to nomadic groups throughout history, these teachers can be seen transporting nearly all of their valuable possessions through the herds of dangerous mammals of the Liberty savannah landscape. Portability appears to be a staple of their culture, as they often pile their items onto carts to be moved to a new location, sometimes barely getting the chance to unpack before they continue to their next destination. Water is often scarce, as a working water fountain could be miles away in any direction, adding time to their trips. In addition, traveling teachers are likely to experience several setbacks due to the clusters of students having oblivious conversations that only expert geographers can navigate around.

Now that all members of the group have been apprehended, many students have been left without teachers. Unless an entire extra high school appears with spare classrooms, Liberty students will be out of luck.

Students Seek to Increase Pep

By Richard Dastardly

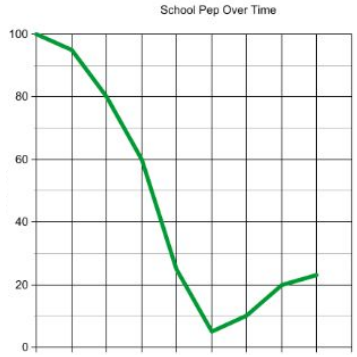
LIBERTY, Olentangy-- As the third quarter draws to a close, many students have begun to realize that there has been a noticeable lack of significant amounts of pep rallies this school year. We then conducted a very accurate twitter poll to try and gauge student pep levels over time to see if students had continuous school spirit despite the lack of pep rallies. The results have been graphed.



As shown in the graph, there has been a slight increase in pep recently. Many Pep Experts or "Pexperts" explain that this has been caused by the recent success of the Boys Basketball Team. But the truth is that there are much darker and more dangerous reasons behind the spike in the graph. After much investigation, it is clear that students are getting synthetic pep to gain a temporary "spirit" for their school.

We strongly recommend you stay away from taking any from of the synthetic pep because it is highly addictive and can cause four different kinds of cancer. The scariest effect of the pep is that if caught with the illegal substance you can receive one detention. To try and keep our readers on the up and up here are a list of the synthetic pep street names:

- Crystal Pepth
- Nick Nack Patty Pep
- XTC (Xcreting Total Cheer)
- The Devils Pep
- Pepzine Spiritol
- PCP (Pineapple Covered Pep)
- China Blue
- Silver Tar
- Heroin

Florida Governor Issues Vacation Warning

By Jefferson Steelflex

TALLAHASSEE, Florida-- Next Saturday marks the beginning of spring break at OLHS, and half of the school has already begun eagerly packing for their trip to Florida. While being both the nation's toilet and resort at the same time, Florida remains a popular vacation spot due to its peaceful beaches and the presence of Disney World. However, experts believe it's all too much.

Governor Ron DeSantis has issued a statewide emergency to warn of the incoming wave of spring breakers. To get an idea of what local residents think about these precautions, I sat down with a resident that we had identified as an average Floridian. The kind 87-year-old woman could not hear me to answer, but smiled and gave me a Werther's Original Caramel (she thought I was her grandson).

Despite the fact that vacation season is great for the economy, there may be too many people who chose to come to Florida this year, and the state feels that its infrastructure may be unable to hold them all. This paramountly derives from the fact that experts fear of the mass amounts of minivans that will overpopulate the infrastructure once they arrive two days after spring break begins. To combat this, the state plans to reroute some planes to another state to clear out some people. This state was originally going to be Mississippi, but the air is speculated to be too dense from the humidity to accommodate air travel; submarines are needed instead. The state ended up deciding to announce that they would reroute planes to Alabama instead, but found that this deterred anyone from going at all.

Hostage Situation Preludes Liberty Final Four Game

By Tyrone Tuggles and Jefferson Steelflex

COLUMBUS, Ohio-- Liberty's basketball team has gone on an exciting run over the past couple weeks, beating both Pickerington North and Central en route to the first basketball final four appearance by any Olentangy School. On Friday they will face St. Vincent-St. Mary High School, a historic high school basketball program.

Coach Nossaman is known for his resourcefulness on and off the court, as he plans to use some new exciting plays to upset the basketball giants in Akron. We saw one of these plays in action two nights before the game had started, when Nossaman took the prized possession of SVSM for ransom: Lebron James, the school's legendary alum.

Nossaman pulled this off by flying to LA in the PatriotCopter. Once at the premises of his mansion, Nossaman planned his break-in, which was easier than normal, as his security doesn't play defense unless they're in the playoffs. Nossaman began by walking right by the guard goats; he wore a Dirk Nowitzki jersey to provide protection. At the front door, he imputed the correct password for the front door, which Nossaman, after a few attempts, correctly guessed to be "KDsmells". Once inside, Nossaman threw a sack over Lebron's head; a task that was difficult due to Lebron's impressive height, but Nossaman, a known sharp shooter, swished it with ease. Lebron, who busy gingerly touching a photo of him, Kyrie, and Kevin Love as a tear dripped down is face, didn't even see it coming.

Nossaman dragged the massive forward to the Copter and flew back to Powell. Lebron was brought to Liberty's gym in and detained in a small cell, and was met by the varsity team asking him for autographs. Meanwhile, Nossaman took a selfie and posted it on twitter, tagging the star and his alma mater. The tweet said, "The King is MINE. Surrender the game or he will forever be a Patriot." We are still waiting to hear a response from SVSM, but hopes are high that Liberty could advance to the state finals saturday.
